Dr. Morris is anxious to correct the impression that the jail is in an unhygienic condition. He told your correspondent this afternoon that it was in first-class order in every possible respect. It was inspected some weeks ago, and its appointments found to be faultless.

Dr. Morris sees his patient three times a day, and himself administers ice baths and medicines. He thinks the crisis of the disease will be reached somewhere between the 24th and 30th of the month, propably later.
